

This week has been National Severe Weather Preparedness Week sponsored by FEMA and the National Oceanic Atmosphere Administration. Severe Weather Preparedness Week encourages individuals, families, businesses and communities to know about severe weather risks take action to prepare for them, and “Be a Force of Nature” by encouraging others to get prepared. As you may have heard, on Wednesday we had weather alarm tests that were heard all over. Deputy Director of the Glasgow- Barren County Emergency Management, Gary Chenowith, tells us that everything went as planned, but with only one alarm in question.

{audio}<http://wcluradio.com/newscuts/0308gary.mp3>{/audio}