The Washington Manufacturing Company will start up again next week, perhaps on Monday, with not more than 50 people employed at first, but by about February 1, they hope to be running full blast with perhaps 175 at work. This factory will be making overalls in limited quantities as it will gradually quit overalls and will then make pants exclusively; however, this will not be done in a jiffy but gradually, as the hands become used to the change. This factory will then turn over the overall work to the Scottsville factory, which will make overalls exclusively.

That school was later taken over by the Cherry brothers, H.H. and T.C., both of whom are still teaching in Bowling Green.

This winter has been exceptionally warm and we have noticed many extraordinary things, in particular, the geraniums in eight flower boxes in front of the Spotswood Hotel. In summer these boxes are filled with beautiful blooming plants, but this winter the red geraniums just continued to bloom until this last cold snap, which necessitated their removal inside the hotel.

Camp Henry Knox now "Fort Knox." The first general order of the War Department in 1932 officially designates this station as a permanent Army post and changes its name to Fort Knox.

Camp Knox started as a cantonment during the World War and was named in honor of General Henry Knox, who was First Chief of Artillery under Washington in the Revolutionary War.

Recently, a board made a survey of needs for a permanent post and recommended $10,000,000 for improvements. The largest joint air and ground maneuvers in the history of the United States, involving 700 planes, has been scheduled for the first week in October this year.

Sometime in the latter part of Tuesday night, a band of outlaws skillfully pried open the door to the Hill Service Station at Cave City, picked up an 800-pound safe, loaded it on a truck, took it about two miles down the Dixie Highway toward Glasgow Junction, blew the door off, absolutely demolishing the safe, got about $100, and left for parts unknown. There is no doubt that the thieves were professionals, since they did a skillful job in every detail, not even rolling or dragging the safe across the floor, but picking it up without leaving a scratch. Neighbors who lived within a very short distance from the station were not even awakened, and no one knows when this work was done.

New School Superintendent. The resignation of Professor R. A. Palmore from the city schools necessitated the election of a new superintendent, resulting in the unanimous election of Professor W. H. Suggs, who is a native Kentuckian and presently a graduate student at the

For three years Professor Suggs was Principal of the Paducah City Schools, for six years the Principal of the Ballard County High School, and one year of the Clay City Schools. He is well qualified for his new position, and Glasgow will welcome him and his family within the next few weeks.

Three Youths Get One Year Each for the Cave City Filling Station Theft. Last week we mentioned the robbery at the Hill Service Station, where the safe was taken, broken into, and its contents taken. The next morning the car the thieves were driving was traced to the spot where the safe had been demolished, and tire tracks there identified the kind of tire on each wheel. When the car was found in Bowling Green, it was easily identified by its tires. In the car a number of articles were found which had been taken from the garage, and three men were arrested and brought to the Glasgow jail. When brought before the court, each of the boys was sentenced to one year in the penitentiary. The boys, ranging in age from 20 to 28, were from Owensboro and were of good families. One of them had raised a crop of tobacco which had sold at a good price and he had bought a second-hand Model A Ford, in which the three had started out on a life of crime but were caught early in the game.

Gas Explosion Is Fatal to Ted Harlan. After ten days of intense suffering, Ted Harlan, 21, died last Friday night from burns received on December 30 when he drained the gasoline from his car by lantern light in the garage on his father's farm in the Cave Springs community. His younger brother, Ezekiel, was with him at the time and was also burned; however, he was able to extinguish the flames on his body by running several rods and rolling in a mud puddle; however, the two boys were not able to extinguish the flames on Ted since his sleeves were saturated with gasoline. Ted was a student at Tompkinsville High School and was also a grocery boy for A.L. Emberton. He had a cheery disposition and was highly regarded by a large acquaintance.
