Dr. Gordon Clark can vouch for that, because Paul recently presented him with a nice 600-pounder for his herd and pig-pen located in Trigg Court here.

MONDAY: The Wigwam Village owned and operated by Frank A. Redford, former resident of this section originated and patented the idea for the unique motor court, is pictured in the current issue of a travel guide published in southern California.

According to the article, other Wigwams are also located in Arizona, Alabama, Florida, and Louisiana.

TUESDAY: Don't know the significance, if any, but this happened a few days ago in the courthouse in Glasgow: Occupants of Tax Commissioner Adwell's office were startled when a picture of President Truman hanging on the wall fell to the floor with a crash. A few minutes later the same thing happened in the office of Circuit Clerk Ross Settle just up the hall, and both pictures fell face down. Don't know the folklore associated with such happening; but wager you it is bad.
